ABSTRACT

The purpose of this directory is to acquaint Southwest academic librarians with current library instruction programs and activities in academic libraries in their region, and to encourage regional cooperation in sharing ideas and materials. Information listed covers the 216 academic libraries in Arizona, Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma, and Texas that responded to a questionnaire on library instructional activities. The names and addresses of these institutions are arranged by state and alphabetically within the state; instructional methods used are indicated by listing the numbers of the survey questions to which the answer was yes for each institution. An analytical index lists instructional activities and materials, in question order, followed by the names of the libraries reporting them. A summary of the survey results is provided, and the questionnaire is appended. (KP)

INTRODUCTION

Librarians are recognizing that it is their responsibility not only to acquire the sources of information needed by their users, but to make the information more accessible by teaching users the skills required to find and take advantage of it. Traditional reference service can no longer deal effectively with the information problems of large numbers of students, many of whom are entirely unfamiliar with the way in which information is organized. Although the idea of library user education is far from new, it is a rapidly expanding field. Studies on the subject appear regularly in the literature. Individual librarians write articles on "how we do it here." Conference programs devoted to the discussion of instructional activities provide alternatives but not answers.

At the national level there are several groups actively involved in collecting and disseminating information about library instruction. Project LOEX (library orientation - instruction exchange) serves as a clearinghouse for academic library instruction. It lends instructional materials deposited by its five hundred member libraries, makes referrals, and publishes a newsletter, The LOEX News. Other national groups are the ACRL's Bibliographic Instruction Task Force, ACRL's Junior College Section Instruction and Use Committee, and the ALA's Instruction in the Use of Libraries Committee.

The concentration of activity at the national level has sometimes made it easier to learn about the library instruction activities of an institution across the country than to find out about what's happening in a library across the state. As a result, a number of state and regional groups have initiated projects to fill the communication gap by making information about instructional programs more readily available to libraries within specific areas.

The Southwestern Library Association, in July, 1975, funded such a group - the Task Force on Library Instruction in the Southwest. Like similar groups in New England, the Southeast, California, New York, Wisconsin, and other states, one of the Task Force's first projects was to publish a directory which will enable librarians to learn what their colleagues and neighbors are doing to teach students effective ways of finding information. The purpose of this directory is to acquaint librarians in the region with current library instruction programs and activities underway in academic libraries in the Southwest. It is hoped that the directory will encourage librarians to contact each other for ideas and materials that will be of mutual benefit to them in implementing their own library instruction programs. The directory can be the first step in promoting regional cooperation in the development of readily adaptable instructional materials such as basic library exercises, research guides, point-of-use tools, and evaluative instruments.

If funding is available, the Task Force's next project will be the development of demonstration materials and workshops intended to help librarians in the Southwest initiate or improve instructional programs in their libraries. The demonstration materials may include slide-tape presentations, videotapes, or films. The focus of these materials will be to show how librarians can interact with users in a variety of instructional situations. The materials will be loaned to individual libraries, local library groups, and to conferences, institutes, or workshops for continuing education. The Task Force will also work with CELS (Continuing Education for Librarians in the Southwest) in publicizing and presenting workshops dealing with library instruction.

HOW THE DIRECTORY WAS COMPILED

After studying directories published by the Wisconsin Association of Academic Libraries, the California Clearinghouse for Library Instruction, and the New England chapter of ACRL, the Task Force constructed a 55-item questionnaire. (See page 96.) It was designed to survey the extent of library instruction activities and the methods, materials, and personnel involved in them. The questionnaire was sent in January 1976 to 242 university, college, and junior college libraries in Arizona, Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma, and Texas. The institutions were identified through the American Library Directory and the National Center for Education Statistics' Education Directory: Higher Education. When the questionnaires were returned, the responses were key punched on to computer cards. A Fortran program was written to analyze the data and produce a print-out from which a directory could be compiled.

The directory has two major components:

1) an alphabetical list by state and name of institution, giving the address and a list of instructional methods in use in each library (pages 10-20).

and

2) an analytical index listing instructional activities and materials followed by the names of the libraries which reported them (pages 21-93).

RESULTS OF THE SURVEY

Response to the survey was overwhelming. Of the 242 questionnaires sent out, 216 were returned - a response rate of 90%. Since anything over 30% is regarded by statisticians as a high response rate, interest in library instruction may be judged to be extraordinarily high.

Characteristics of institutions responding

Libraries responding to the survey were classified as follows:

Type of library	Percentage of total respondents
Two-year college	35
Four-year undergraduate	20
Four-year & graduate	34
Graduate school	1
Subject division in large system	9

Two-year college libraries and libraries serving four-year graduate institutions were the largest groups, as would be expected. These results reflect the emphasis on instruction, and on the learning resource center in particular, at two-year colleges, and the greater availability of resources at the large four-year & graduate universities.

State Breakdown

The number of responses received from each state was as follows:

State	# of Respondents	Percentage of Total Responses
Arizona	11	5
Arkansas	14	6
Louisiana	26	12
New Mexico	16	7
Oklahoma	28	13
Texas	121	56

Enrollment

Enrollment at responding institutions varied from a low of 50 to a high of 42,000 students.

Personnel

Twenty-eight libraries (13%) reported one or more librarians working full-time on instruction. Most of these were at two-year colleges. Two universities reported totals of 33 and 42 people working on instruction (this includes both full- and part-time librarians and support staff). The norm was between 1 and 3 librarians spending some time on library instruction, possibly with some clerical assistance.

Funding

As expected, only a very few libraries (5% in each case) reported receiving either internal or external financial support for their instructional programs. Internal support was usually in the form of payment for materials and/or time by an academic department within the parent institution. Several of the external funds were in the form of grants under Title II of ESEA, and these were mostly to two-year colleges.

Instructional techniques and materials ranked in order of use

GROUP I - used by over 50% of respondents

Guided tour
Lecture on demand
Orientation lecture
Informal feedback for evaluation
Handbook
Bibliographies

GROUP II - used by 20-50% of respondents

Point-of-use instruction
Course-integrated instruction
Graphics
Transparencies
Tests
Slides / slide-tapes / audio tapes
Self-guided tour
Statistics for evaluation
Student questionnaire
Self-paced materials
Credit course

GROUP III - used by less than 20% of respondents

Faculty handbook
Term-paper clinic
Videotapes
Films
Mail-out to students
Non-credit course
Faculty questionnaires
Teaching machines
CAI

GROUP I

The most widely-used methods fall into the category of "passive" techniques - that is, the library simply responds to a demand for service on an individual "crisis" basis, dealing with each demand separately as it arises (e.g. lecture on demand). These methods are also cheap in the short run but expensive over a period of time.

GROUP II

Group II methods are more outgoing in character (student questionnaires, self-paced instruction), more geared to the individual student's needs (self-paced instruction, self-guided tour), and place more emphasis on audio-visual techniques. They are cheap in the short run but expensive over a period of time.

GROUP III

Group III methods seem to consist largely of those that have fallen into disfavor because of their obvious drawbacks (non-credit courses) and those that are very expensive (videotapes, CAI).

Clearly the most common methods are those that are most traditional, requiring a minimum of resources and planning, and relying on outside impetus rather than library initiative. It is encouraging to see that the more aggressive methods are apparently increasing in popularity, although many of these are not possible without extra funds and staff time.

PROBLEMS OF INTERPRETATION OF SURVEY RESULTS

It is extremely difficult to design a questionnaire that is free from ambiguity. The Task Force tried to make the question categories mutually exclusive, and to define terms where it was thought that clarification was necessary. Nevertheless, a follow-up telephone survey indicated that respondents had interpreted the questions in many different ways. For this reason, the directory is not completely accurate. Some of the most common discrepancies are listed here.

1) Although the term "library instruction" was defined in a letter accompanying the questionnaire, many respondents interpreted it in their own way. For example, many of the credit courses listed are really courses in library science programs rather than courses in library use for the general student.

2) A surprisingly high percentage of respondents reported course-integrated instruction. On investigation, this proved in the majority of cases to be simply one general talk on reference sources given to a class within an academic department - in other words, lecture on demand.

3) The "other" categories were included in the questionnaire in hopes of turning up some really innovative instructional methods not described by any of the standard phrases. Although many respondents checked "other", we were unable to find a single case where the program described could not be fitted into one of the standard categories. This is not to say that there are no new techniques being tried, just that they exist within known parameters. (The "other" categories have been excluded from the published directory, since they served no particular purpose.)

4) In the section on non-print materials, it was found that in a great many cases respondents checked videotapes, films, audio tapes, etc. because they had access to such equipment, although in fact no use was being made of it for library instruction purposes.

Most of these inaccuracies seem to have arisen from the fact that there was a tendency to describe the ideal rather than the actual. The directory thus has to be consulted with the understanding that things may not always be what they seem.

CONCLUSION

Owing to differences in the way the various regional directories are indexed, it is difficult to make comparisons between library instruction activities in the Southwest and other regions. Patterns in choice of method would appear to be similar in all academic libraries. The size of this directory is an indication of the amount of library instruction being carried out in this region; it is hoped that its publication will encourage librarians to contact one another with problems and ideas, and stimulate them to expand their programs with a variety of techniques and materials to meet the various needs of their users.

APPENDIX B:

THE TASK FORCE PROPOSAL

SOUTHWESTERN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION

TASK FORCE APPLICATION

****

I. Name of proposed Task Force: Task Force on Library Instruction in the Southwest.

II. Designated chairman:

Name & Title	Mailing Address	Telephone
Ann Brooke	Undergraduate Library, University of Texas Austin, Texas 78712	512-471-5222

Co-Chairman:

Susan Burton	Undergraduate Library, University of Texas Austin, Texas 78712	512-471-5222

III. Additional members:

Name & Title	Mailing Address	Telephone
Ann Neville	Undergraduate Library, University of Texas Austin, Texas 78712	512-471-5222
John Lolley	Tarrant County Junior College, Library 3501 Campus Drive Fort Worth, Texas 76119
Julie Duggan	East Texas State University Library Commerce, Texas 75428
Kay Rzasa	Texas A&M University Library College Station, Texas 77843

It is not intended that the Task Force be dominated by Texas. However, at the moment we are unable to identify interested librarians from other states, doing so will be a part of the Task Force's purpose.

IV. Describe the purpose and goals of the proposed Task Force.

Libraries through the country are recognizing the advantages of pooling their resources and expertise to cooperate in dealing with problems of common concern.

Their activities have taken the form of interlibrary loan networks, complementary acquisitions progrsms, Union lists of serials, and on-line cataloging. While most cooperative ventures have dealt with aspects of technical services, a few regions have pioneered a joint approach to one of the most persistent issues facing librarians in public services - instruction in the use of libraries.

Libraries increasingly are abandoning the "storehouse of knowledge" role, as we realize that as librarians our responsibility is not only to acquire and house the sources of information needed by our users, but to make the information accessible to them by providing them with the skills required to find and take advantage of it. The need to educate library users is scarcely in question: the real problem confronting us is how best to do it. Conflicting reports appear regularly in the literature. National surveys of programs in a handful of institutions provide descriptions but no answers. Individual librarians write articles capsulizing the instructional activities in their own libraries. Project LOEX lends materials deposited by its 250 members, making it possible for a handful of libraries to share with others their techniques and materials.

The Wisconsin Association of Academic Libraries, as well as regional groups in California, New England and Tennessee, have initiated projects, such as clearinghouses for library instruction materials, that are intended to make information about instructional programs more readily available to libraries within specific areas.

In light of these developments, the SWLA Interest Group on "Educating the Library User" proposes the formation of a Task Force whose function would be to carry out the activities described below.

V. Describe the specific aims of the Task Force in terms of a "Program of Work."

The Task Force proposes a four-phase program which is described below. At this point, funding is only being requested for the first phase of the program.

FIRST PHASE:

Purpose: To produce a directory of library instruction programs offered by academic libraries in the six states comprising the Southwestern Library Association area. The purposes of such a directory are: -

a) To encourage librarians to visit and exchange information with other librarians working within their geographical area. Although libraries can join Project LOEX if they wish to see the types of materials used elsewhere, they currently have no means of identifying programs within any given area.

b) To inspire libraries without instructional programs to draw on the experiences of other libraries in similar situations.

c) To facilitate the exchange of materials and ideas.

d) To promote regional cooperation in the development of techniques such as basic library exercises, library skills tests, point-of-use tools, and evaluative instruments.

Procedures:

a) Junior colleges, colleges and universities in the six-state SWLA region will be identified through the Directory of Higher Education and the American Library Directory.

b) A questionnaire will be written and administered to survey the extent of library instruction programs at these institutions, and the methods, materials and personnel involved in them. This questionnaire will be adapted from that used by the Wisconsin Association of Academic Librarians in compiling their directory, and from the survey conducted by the ACRL Committee on Bibliographic Instruction. (Copies of these questionnaires are attached.)

c) The questionnaire will be either machine readable or key punched so that the results can be collated and analyzed by computer.

d) The results will be published as a two-part directory consisting of an alphabetical list by state and name of institution, giving the name of the person to contact for further information, the size of the student body, and data on the scope and type of library instruction offered.

an analytical index listing instructional activities and characteristics of programs (e.g. formal courses, library exercises, full-time instructional librarian), followed by the names of the libraries whose programs include those activities.

e) The directory will be distributed to all libraries which participated in the survey, and to interested SWLA members; extra copies will be made available to interested libraries for a small charge. It will also be submitted to the ERIC Clearinghouse, in order to make it available on a nationwide basis.

f) A presentation will be made at the 1976 SWLA Conference involving those libraries surveyed, and based on the survey findings.

SECOND PHASE:

The second phase of the project involves setting up a distribution center for the collection and dissemination of print and non-print instructional materials produced by academic libraries in the SWLA region.

a) The center will function as a regional resource center by developing a comprehensive collection of materials used in academic libraries in Arizona, Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas.

b) The center will be housed at a location where it can be adequately maintained and expanded.

c) The collection will be indexed so that materials will be accessible by method, format, content, audience and place of origin.

THIRD PHASE:

The project's third phase calls for the development of demonstration materials and workshops intended to help librarians initiate and improve instructional programs in their libraries.

a) The demonstration materials could include slide-tape presentations, videotapes or films. The focus of these materials will be to show how librarians can interact with users in a variety of instructional situations.

b) The demonstration materials will be loaned to individual libraries and local library groups, or used at conferences, institutes or workshops for continuing education. This could be coordinated through the CELS office.

c) The Task Force will work with CELS in publicizing and presenting workshops dealing with library instruction.

FOURTH PHASE:

The fourth phase will expand the project to include public, school and special libraries in the SWLA region.

VI. What time period do you propose for the Task Force to accomplish its goals?

It is anticipated that phase I of the proposal will be completed before the 1976 SWLA Conference, so that a presentation can be made at that conference.

VII. What participation, if any, does the Task Force anticipate with other associations?

We envisage liaison with state library associations, with State Libraries in t Southwest, and with local library groups. This contact will most likely be initiat during Phase I of the proposal and increased during the later phases.

VIII. If the Task Force requests funding from SWLA to support the "Program of Work. please outline by item.

Duplicating	$ 30.00
Stationery	30.00
Programming and computer time costs	250.00
Mailing of survey	40.00
Publication of directory (500 copies)	250.00
Mailing of directory	50.00
	$ 650.00

Supplementary funding from other agencies will be sought to support phases II - IV. However, allocation of funds from SWLA to carry out Phase I will put the Task Force in a position of strength from which to negotiate the remaining phases of the projec

IX. Summarize how the "Program of Work" for this proposed Task Force would promote regional interests and demonstrate the responsiveness of the SWLA in meeting the needs of librarians and their patrons in our six state region.

Education in the use of libraries is one of the most topical issues in the library world. Since there is no coordination at this time between libraries in the SWLA region working on this issue, the work of this Task Force will lend weight to SWLA's claim "to promote all library interests" in the Southwest. It would also enhance the growing image of SWLA as a pioneer in cooperative library activities.
